Although a native New Yorker, Steve Immerman has lived in the Midwest for the last 35 years, currently residing in Eau Claire, Wisconsin. Immerman has been working in glass for the last 25 years, but exclusively with kiln formed glass for over a decade. He uses his time creating artwork as a respite from his more stressful career as a general surgeon and surgical oncologist (cancer surgeon).

He recognizes many parallels between kiln formed glass and surgery. They each involve technical skill and precise planning, attention to detail, and careful preparation for the part of the process where the elements are left alone to heal (in the case of surgery) or fuse (with kiln formed glass). Both processes require intense knowledge of what is expected to happen, and neither allow much margin for error. Both combine science and art.

His journey in glass has included classes throughout the United States with recognized kiln formed glass artists, as well as extensive personal study and experimentation. He has been a finalist in the ArtsWest Wisconsin show on two occasions, and has been a finalist in the Bullseye Glass Company's annual kiln formed glass competition in both 2002 and 2004. His work has been featured on the cover of Glass Craftsman Magazine twice in the last two years, and in 2005 he was nominated to be the commissioned artist to supply original artwork for the Wisconsin Arts Foundation's annual Governor's Award in Support of the Arts. His work is available at several glass art galleries.

Steve Immerman kiln formed glass art

"When people look at my work I want them to be at the edge of recognizing something beyond the glass itself; I want the glass to draw them to a memory, emotion or feeling at a subliminal level."
